The Free Dictionary (www.thefreedictionary.com) defines employment law as the body of law that governs:

- the employer-employee relationship, including individual employment contracts,
- the application of tort and contract doctrines,
- the issues such as the right to organise and negotiate collective bargaining agreements, protection from discrimination, wages and hours, and health and safety.

Contract of Employment

The basic feature of employment law in almost every country is that the rights and obligations of the worker and the employer mediated through the contract of employment or an employment contract between the two. It is an agreement between an employer and an employee which sets out their employment rights, responsibilities and duties. These are called the 'terms' of the contract.

In the UK your employment contract doesn't have to be in writing. However, you are entitled to a written statement of your main employment terms within two months of starting work. Having a written contract could cut out disputes with your employer at a later date and will help you understand your employment rights.

You and your employer are bound to the employment contract until it ends (usually by giving notice) or until the terms are changed (usually in an agreement between you and your employer).

The main sections of the employment contract may include:

1. Term of employment
2. Probation
3. Compensation and benefits / Salary
4. Duties and responsibilities
5. Termination and notice
6. Confidentiality
7. Working hours
8. Annual leave
9. Sick leave

- £4.35 - the rate for workers aged under 18.

You can always check current rates on <https://www.gov.uk/national-minimum-wage-rates>

If you are of compulsory school age you 7..... (not/entitle) to the NMW. Some of your other employment rights are also different.

In 2019 the minimum wage in Poland 8..... (calculate) at the level of PLN 14.70 gross per hour and PLN 2250 per month.

Being made redundant

Read this text and pay attention to the bolded words or do this exercise online:

<https://pustulka.edu.pl/PublicExercise/PublicExerciseGo/997>

Redundancy is a form of dismissal from the job, caused by the employer who needs to reduce the workforce for various reasons, e.g. implementing new system or technology which makes some jobs unnecessary, the need to cut costs or closing down the business.

If the employer is making 20 or more employees redundant in one establishment within a 90-day period, this is a collective redundancy. If the employer is thinking about making collective redundancies, they have a duty to consult with the representatives of the employees' trade union. If the employer fails to consult the representatives then a claim may be made to an Employment Tribunal for a protective award (a monetary award of up to 90 days pay).

Dismissal

Read this text and pay attention to the bolded words or do this exercise online:

<https://pustulka.edu.pl/PublicExercise/PublicExerciseGo/998>

Dismissal is when the employer ends the employee's employment. This could happen in several ways, including:

- the employer ends the employee's employment, with or without notice
- the employer constructively dismisses the employee by breaching the employment contract so badly that the employee is forced to leave
- fixed-term contract is not renewed.

A contract of employment is a legally binding agreement between the employee and the employer. A breach of contract happens when either one of the parties breaks one of the terms (for example, if the employer doesn't pay the employee wages, or the employee doesn't work the agreed hours). If you do decide to take legal action, it can either be through an Employment Tribunal, which is usually cheaper and quicker, or through a civil court.

If the employee breaches the contract, the employer should try to settle the matter with the employee informally. If the employer suffers a financial loss because of the breach, they could make a complaint for damages against the employee.

The most common breaches of contract by an employee are when they quit without giving proper notice, or when they go to work for a competitor when their contract doesn't allow it.

Unfair dismissal

Unfair dismissal is where the employer sacks the employee (or forces them to leave) without good reason or fails to follow fair dismissal procedures.

A dismissal could be automatically unfair if the employee is dismissed because they tried to claim one of their statutory employment rights. In most cases they need at least a year's service before they can make an unfair dismissal claim.

Wrongful dismissal

Wrongful dismissal is when the employer breaches the contract in dismissing the employee or forcing them to leave. For example, they could dismiss the employee without notice or without following their disciplinary and dismissal process.

Constructive dismissal

Constructive dismissal occurs when the employee is forced to resign because their employer's behaviour has become so heinous or it made their life so difficult that they may consider themselves to have been fired. The employee must prove that the behaviour was unlawful. The reason for leaving your job must be serious - there must be a fundamental breach of contract, e.g.:

- not paying the employee or suddenly demoting for no reason
- forcing the employee to accept unreasonable changes to the conditions of employment without their agreement (e.g. suddenly telling them to relocate to another town, or making them work night shifts when the contract is only for day work)
- bullying, harassment or violence against the employee by work colleagues
- making the employee work in dangerous conditions.

Exercise 3

Scan the text above to find the words and phrases which are synonymous to the verbs:

to employ	to dismiss

Then use your dictionary and try to add as many words as you can.

Discrimination

Discrimination means treating some people differently from others. There are certain reasons that your employer can't discriminate against you for. You can't be discriminated against because of your:

1. gender
2. marital status
3. gender reassignment
4. pregnancy
5. sexual orientation
6. disability
7. race
8. colour
9. ethnic background
10. nationality
11. religion or belief
12. age

Exercise 4

Read the descriptions of certain examples of recent discrimination cases. Use the words in brackets in the correct form. Later discuss on what grounds the claims could have been made. (all descriptions come from: www.emplaw.co.uk). You can do this exercise online:
